Length: 120 minutes
Airdate: 1/1/2010 6:00:00 AM
O.B. Date: 12/30/2009 9:00:00 PM
Service: PBS
Format: Documentary
Segment Length: 01:56:46

Shot over 11 years by renowned fashion photographer Steven Sebring, Patti Smith: Dream of Life is an intimate portrait of the legendary rocker, poet and artist. Following Smith's personal reflections over a decade, the film explores her many art forms and the friends and poets who inspired her - William Burroughs, Allen Ginsberg, Bob Dylan, Robert Mapplethorpe and Michael Stipe. She emerges as a crucial, contemporary link between the Beats, punks and today's music. Shot in lush, dark tones, featuring rare performance clips and narrated by the artist herself, Patti Smith: Dream of Life is an impressionistic journal of a multi-faceted artist that underscores her unique place in American culture. Winner of the 2008 Sundance Film Festival Excellence in Cinematography Award: Documentary. A production of Clean Socks and THIRTEEN. Produced by Steven Sebring, Margaret Smilow and Scott Vogel.

Segment Length: 00:00:00

His standing among the most enduring 20th-century American musical artists is without question, yet his story is rarely told beyond the tragic circumstances of his death. Enormously talented and equally complicated, Gaye created an intimate style - full of honesty, integrity, vulnerability - and, essentially, gave the world his autobiography in lyrics and melody. "The Wonderful One," "The Trouble Man," "The Prince of Soul" -- he was the Motown star who challenged and changed the face of black music, embodying its evolution from roots in gospel, jazz and rhythm and blues to sophisticated pop and sexually, politically charged soul. Extensive performance footage and insight from Mary Wilson, Smokey Robinson, Gladys Knight, Mos Def, among many others, capture the tone and texture of a career that still leaves an indelible mark on the musical landscape.

Episode Title: Louisa May Alcott: The Woman Behind Little Women
Length: 90 minutes
Airdate: 1/2/2010 9:00:00 PM
O.B. Date: 12/28/2009 9:00:00 PM
Service: PBS
Format: Documentary
Segment Length: 01:26:46

The author of Little Women is an almost universally recognized name. Her reputation as a morally upstanding New England spinster, reflecting the conventional propriety of late 19th-century Concord, is firmly established. However, raised among reformers, Transcendentalists and skeptics, the intellectual protégé of Emerson and Hawthorne and Thoreau, Alcott was actually a free thinker with democratic ideals and progressive ideas about women - a worldly careerist of sorts. Most surprising is that she led, under the pseudonym A.M. Barnard, a literary double life, undiscovered until the 1940s. As Barnard, Alcott penned scandalous, sensational works with characters running the gamut from murderers and revolutionaries to cross-dressers and opium addicts - a far cry from her familiar fatherly mentors, courageous mothers and appropriately impish children.

Length: 60 minutes
Airdate: 1/11/2010 9:00:00 PM
O.B. Date: 1/11/2010 9:00:00 PM
Service: PBS
Format: Documentary
Segment Length: 00:00:00

Sam Cooke put the spirit of the Black church into popular music -- creating a new sound and setting into motion a chain of events that forever altered the course of popular music and race relations in America. With "You Send Me" in 1957, Cooke became the first African American artist to reach #1 on both the R&B and the pop charts. It was groundbreaking. It was also risky for this young gospel performer to alienate his fans by embracing "the devil's music" -- but he proved, with his pop/gospel hybrid, that it was, indeed, possible to win over white teenage listeners and keep his faithful church followers intact.

In the caves of the Dordogne region of France, host Alan Alda witnesses the spectacular paintings and carvings that date back some 30,000 years, artwork that archeologists once thought to be the first record of people with minds like ours. When this art was created, Europe had already been peopled for hundreds of thousands of years by Neanderthals. Alda discovers, from visits to sites where Neanderthals once lived, that they were tenacious and resourceful, but they produced no art and employed a stone tool technology that changed little over millennia. The people who painted the caves, our ancestors, were strikingly different, possessed of the "human spark," capable not only of art but of innovative technology and symbolic communication. Alda asks: Where and when did the human spark first ignite? In these caves, as archeologists have long believed? Or at a much earlier time -- and on another continent?

Lolis Eric Elie, a New Orleans newspaperman, takes viewers on a tour of the city in what becomes a reflection on the relevance of history folded into a love letter to his storied neighborhood, Faubourg Tremé. Arguably the oldest black neighborhood in America and the birthplace of jazz, Faubourg Tremé was home to the largest community of free black people in the Deep South during slavery and a hotbed of political ferment. Here, black and white, free and enslaved, rich and poor cohabitated, collaborated and clashed to create America's first civil rights movement and a unique American culture. FAUBOURG TREMÉ: THE UNTOLD STORY OF BLACK NEW ORLEANS is a tale of heartbreak, hope and resiliency - all set to a soundtrack of fabulous New Orleans music.

Filmmaker Byron Hurt, a life-long hip-hop fan, was watching rap music videos on BET when he realized that each video was nearly identical. Guys in fancy cars threw money at the camera while scantily clad women danced in the background. As he discovered how stereotypical rap videos had become, Hurt, a former college quarterback turned activist, decided to make a film about the gender politics of hip-hop, the music and the culture that he grew up with. "The more I grew and the more I learned about sexism and violence and homophobia, the more those lyrics became unacceptable to me," he says. "And I began to become more conflicted about the music that I loved." The result is "HIP-HOP: Beyond Beats and Rhymes," a riveting documentary that tackles issues of masculinity, sexism, violence and homophobia in today's hip-hop culture.

Computers, software and even cell phones have radically altered our relationship to mass culture and technology, providing consumers with the tools to become producers, or "remixers," of their own media. But long before everyday people began posting their video mash-ups on the Web, hip-hop musicians perfected the art of audio montage through a sport they called "sampling." "Copyright Criminals," a documentary by Benjamin Franzen and Kembrew McLeod, examines the creative and commercial value of musical sampling, including the ongoing debates about artistic expression, copyright law and (of course) money.

IN DREAMS is the climactic and inspiring life and times - and music - of first generation Rock And Roll Hall Of Fame inductee Roy Orbison. This major one-hour documentary film deals with the saga of pop's most enigmatic and often underappreciated pioneer. For Orbison, whose rock and roll career spanned the 1950's through the 80's, ambition and stardom always took a back-seat to the purity and essence of his art, which history has judged to be a cornerstone of 20th century popular music. Heartbreak was no stranger to Orbison, who lost his first wife Claudette in a motorcycle accident in June of '66, and again only a year later lost two of their sons in a tragic fire. The melancholy in his songs resonated with listeners of all ages, but especially heartsick teenagers who knew how it felt to lose in love. He mesmerized an entire generation of fans in America - and more importantly, enduringly, through the U.K. and Europe with such classics as: "Only The Lonely," "Crying," "Oh, Pretty Woman," "Blue Bayou," and "You Got It" all of which are performed throughout the course of IN DREAMS. With this release, a wider audience than ever can now look, listen and learn what the legend of Roy Orbison was all about.

In 1957 Pat Boone was finishing his senior year at Columbia University. He also released five singles that hit the charts; Four made the top 10 and two went all the way to number one. He starred in two movies, turned 23 and found out he was going to be a father for the forth time. It was quite a year. With everything else that was going on, ABC decided that Pat was going to be the youngest person ever to have his own television show. So, on October 3, 1957, the Pat Boone Chevy Showroom was born. During the hit show's three-year run, Pat's guest stars were the biggest names in the entertainment industry. This program is literally a time capsule of television variety entertainment, as it existed over half a century ago. These digitally re-mastered performances will be presented exclusively on PBS for the first time in HD.

IN DREAMS is the climactic and inspiring life and times - and music - of first generation Rock And Roll Hall Of Fame inductee Roy Orbison. This major one-hour documentary film deals with the saga of pop's most enigmatic and often underappreciated pioneer. For Orbison, whose rock and roll career spanned the 1950's through the 80's, ambition and stardom always took a back-seat to the purity and essence of his art, which history has judged to be a cornerstone of 20th century popular music. Heartbreak was no stranger to Orbison, who lost his first wife Claudette in a motorcycle accident in June of '66, and again only a year later lost two of their sons in a tragic fire. The melancholy in his songs resonated with listeners of all ages, but especially heartsick teenagers who knew how it felt to lose in love. He mesmerized an entire generation of fans in America - and more importantly, enduringly, through the U.K. and Europe with such classics as: "Only The Lonely," "Crying," "Oh, Pretty Woman," "Blue Bayou," and "You Got It" all of which are performed throughout the course of IN DREAMS. With this release, a wider audience than ever can now look, listen and learn what the legend of Roy Orbison was all about.

This feature documentary traces the life and work of American sculptor Augustus Saint-Gaudens (1848-1907) from his birth in Dublin, Ireland, to his work in New York City and Paris to his death in Cornish, New Hampshire. Trained in Paris and Rome, Saint-Gaudens is considered America's premier sculptor of the 19th and early 20th centuries. During a career that spanned three decades, Saint-Gaudens created nearly 150 works of art, including a number of major public monuments to heroes of the Civil War. The story of his personal life is woven around in-depth studies of five of his major works of art, including the contemplative Standing Lincoln in Lincoln Park, Chicago; the moving Shaw Memorial on Boston Common; the powerful Sherman Monument in Central Park; the serene Diana in the Philadelphia Museum of Art; and the stirring Adams Memorial in Washington, DC. Actor Victor Garber narrates.

John James Audubon - whose name became synonymous with American conservation - killed thousands of birds during his quest to create Birds of America, arguably the largest and most beautiful book of the 19th century. Audubon was at once entrepreneur, artist, scientist, husband, father, legend - and walking contradiction. Born in what is now Haiti, the illegitimate son of a French plantation owner and his mistress, Audubon ultimately became the quintessential American pioneer. On the frontier, he played the debonair European. In the drawing rooms of Europe, he acted the part of wild woodsman. Although faithful to his long-suffering wife, he nonetheless wrote her lengthy letters bursting with details of his encounters with other women. Jailed once for bankruptcy, he went on to dine at the White House. The self-taught artist and self-made man was praised by royalty, shunned by his in-laws and blackballed by the Philadelphia Academy of Natural Sciences. AMERICAN MASTERS "John James Audubon: Drawn From Nature," details Audubon's epic adventures while capturing the full-scale beauty of his definitive book.

Now in his early 90s, I.M. Pei was invited to design a modern museum to house the antiquities of Suzhou. This film follows this personal and architectural journey from west to east, an expansive full-circle, a literal coming home -- a realization of Pei's lifelong dream. But also, his biggest challenge and, seven and a half years in the making, a work that he ultimately defines as "my biography." While Pei's perspective is always in the forefront, local residents, design specialists, Suzhou officials, architects, designers and scholars comment on Pei's life and work.

Crazy consequential politics, a stew of ultimatum, accusation and policy prescription. We cover it all tonight on Washington Week. President Barack Obama said, "No matter which approach you favor, I believe the United States Congress owes the American people a final vote on healthcare reform." Sen. Mitch McConnell (R-KY) [Senate Minority Leader] said, "The only thing that will be bipartisan about this proposal is the opposition to it." Healthcare heads towards high noon. Will the president's plan to forge ahead without Republican support work? Should it? Plus, what are they putting in the political water? The House Ways and Means Committee chairman steps aside. Rep. Charles Rangel (D-NY) said, "I should not do anything that would impede the success of other Democrats." A freshman lawmaker quits under a cloud. New York's governor teeters on the edge of resignation. Gov. David Paterson (D-NY) said, "When the truth comes out, I'm confident that I'll be vindicated." And a retiring Republican holds the Senate hostage for days over a jobs bill. Sen. Jim Bunning (R-KY) said, "It's not a filibuster when you object." All in a week when the nation's unemployment rate remains stubbornly stuck at 9.7 percent. We explain the story behind the stories with Jeanne Cummings of Politico; Michael Duffy of Time magazine; and John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times.

Haiti Earthquake: Faith-based groups are raising money, sending supplies, providing emergency medical help, and trying to locate staff, missionaries, and workers. In the U.S. there are special prayer services and vigils for the victims. Remembering Martin Luther King Jr.: "I think King would make a case for the principles and practices of nonviolence even in settling disputes between nations," says Cheryl Sanders, Professor of Christian ethics at Howard University School of Divinity and Senior Pastor at Third Street Church of God in Washington, DC. Wall Street and Values: The financial crisis is a moral crisis, says religious leader Jim Wallis, and repairing the economy will require a moral reawakening. Jim Wallis Extended Interview: Watch more of Bob Abernethy's interview with Jim Wallis about values, the economy, and financial reform. Forest Monks: Engaged Buddhism means "you must confront social suffering," says Thai scholar and activist Sulak Sivaraksa, "and people suffer now because of the environment."

The disaster in Haiti, the challenges of the past, the present, and the future, plus, populist politics at the White House and maybe in Massachusetts, too, tonight on Washington Week. President Barack Obama said, "To the people of Haiti we say clearly and with conviction you will not be forsaken. You will not be forgotten. In this, your hour of greatest need, America stands with you." A terrible earthquake. AMB. Raymond Alcide Joseph said, "It's a major catastrophe for Haiti." A devastating death toll. We need more people down here. Grief and uncertainty everywhere. President Bill Clinton said, "The most urgent thing we can do now is get them through the next week, eight to 10 days. We have to find the living and the dead and we have to take care of both." Can Haiti, plagued by decades of deprivation, survive? In Washington, the president talks tough to bankers paying themselves big bonuses. President Obama said, "We want our money back and we're going to get it." But will taxpayers still pay in the end? And in Massachusetts, a potential political upset that could undo Ted Kennedy's legacy. Covering the week, Helene Cooper of the New York Times, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, Deborah Solomon of the Wall Street Journal, and Dan Balz of the Washington Post. Plus, a special report from ABC's Martha Raddatz on the ground in Haiti.

As credit card companies face rising public anger, new regulation from Washington, and a potential perfect storm of economic bad news, FRONTLINE correspondent Lowell Bergman examines the future of the massive consumer loan industry and its impact on a fragile national economy. In a joint project with the New York Times--a follow-up to the Secret History of the Credit Card--Bergman and the Times talk to industry insiders, lobbyists, politicians, and consumer advocates as they square off over new regulation and the possible creation of a consumer finance protection agency. How are the credit, debit, and pre-paid card industries repositioning themselves to maintain high profits under the new rules? The stakes couldn't be higher as many fear the consumer loan industry could be at the center of the next crisis.

Haiti Earthquake: Faith-based groups are raising money, sending supplies, providing emergency medical help, and trying to locate staff, missionaries, and workers. In the U.S. there are special prayer services and vigils for the victims. Remembering Martin Luther King Jr.: "I think King would make a case for the principles and practices of nonviolence even in settling disputes between nations," says Cheryl Sanders, professor of Christian ethics at Howard University School of Divinity and Senior Pastor at Third Street Church of God in Washington, DC. Wall Street and Values: The financial crisis is a moral crisis, says religious leader Jim Wallis, and repairing the economy will require a moral reawakening. Jim Wallis Extended Interview: Watch more of Bob Abernethy's interview with Jim Wallis about values, the economy, and financial reform. Forest Monks: Engaged Buddhism means "you must confront social suffering," says Thai scholar and activist Sulak Sivaraksa, "and people suffer now because of the environment."

The disaster in Haiti, the challenges of the past, the present, and the future, plus, populist politics at the White House and maybe in Massachusetts, too, tonight on Washington Week. President Barack Obama said, "To the people of Haiti we say clearly and with conviction you will not be forsaken. You will not be forgotten. In this, your hour of greatest need, America stands with you." A terrible earthquake. AMB. Raymond Alcide Joseph said, "It's a major catastrophe for Haiti." A devastating death toll. We need more people down here. Grief and uncertainty everywhere. President Bill Clinton said, "The most urgent thing we can do now is get them through the next week, eight to 10 days. We have to find the living and the dead and we have to take care of both." Can Haiti, plagued by decades of deprivation, survive? In Washington, the president talks tough to bankers paying themselves big bonuses. President Obama said, "We want our money back and we're going to get it." But will taxpayers still pay in the end? And in Massachusetts, a potential political upset that could undo Ted Kennedy's legacy. Covering the week, Helene Cooper of the New York Times, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, Deborah Solomon of the Wall Street Journal, and Dan Balz of the Washington Post. Plus, a special report from ABC's Martha Raddatz on the ground in Haiti.

The State of the Union, divided, united, anxious, worried, or all of the above? We consider all the options tonight on Washington Week. President Barack Obama said, "We don't quit. I don't quit." The president's big speech casts a spotlight on a critical political dilemma. President Obama said, "We have to recognize that we face more than a deficit of dollars right now. We face a deficit of trust." He took on Washington. President Obama said, "What frustrates the American people is a Washington where every day is Election Day." But blamed his own failings on poor communication. President Obama said, "I take my share of the blame for not explaining it more clearly to the American people." And today the president took his complaint directly to his most consistent detractors, House Republicans. Rep. Jason Chaffetz (R-UT) said, "I am one of 22 House freshmen. We didn't create this mess, but we are here to help clean it up." So what happens now? On job creation? On health care? On bipartisanship? Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "We're going to look for common ground, but we're not going to roll over on our principles." After a year of modest successes and setbacks, we assess the State of the Union with the reporters covering the week: Peter Baker of the New York Times, Dan Balz of the Washington Post, Gloria Borger of CNN, and John Harris of Politico.

Deficits and priorities, the beginning and the end of bipartisanship, gays in the military, and the politics of terror, tonight on Washington Week. Peter Orszag said, "One of the lingering problems in our financial markets, however, is access to credit for small businesses. That's why in this budget..." Sen. Judd Gregg (R-NH) said, "No, no, no, you can't make that type of statement with any legitimacy." Fireworks at a budget hearing? Fresh signs of broad disagreements in Washington, over spending and debt. President Barack Obama said, "We simply cannot continue to spend as if debts just don't have consequences." Over the balance of power and politics. Sen. Scott Brown (R-MA) said, "I'm hopeful that there'll be bipartisan negotiations. That's part of the problem, the fact that there is--it was always 60-40, 60-40. Over who gets to serve his or her country. Adm. Mike Mullen said, "I cannot escape being troubled by the fact that we have in place a policy which forces young men and women to lie about who they are in order to defend their fellow citizens." And over who gets prosecuted for terrorism and how. Sen. Lindsey Graham (R-SC) said, "I believe it is inappropriate to give the mastermind of 9/11 full constitutional rights of an American citizen." Washington at war. We sort through it all with the reporters covering the week: Jackie Calmes of the New York Times, Michael Duffy of Time Magazine, Nancy Youssef of McClatchy Newspapers, and Pete Williams of NBC News.

Is Washington broken? And if it is, who's supposed to fix it? How an Indiana senator shook up the capital, what it means for Democrats, Republicans, and for you, tonight on Washington Week. Sen. Evan Bayh (D-IN) said, "We've got a lot of good people in Congress, but they're trapped in a dysfunctional system." If Congress is indeed dysfunctional, is the answer to flee? Rep. Lincoln Diaz-Balart (R-FL) said, "I will not seek a 10th term in the United States Congress this November." Rep. Patrick Kennedy (D-RI) said, "My life has taken a new direction and I will not be a candidate for reelection this year." With the White House agenda on the ropes, the President searches for the bright side. Pres. Barack Obama said, "One year later, it is largely thanks to the Recovery Act that a second depression is no longer a possibility." But has the opposition finally found its voice? Mitt Romney said, "The gold medal that was won last night by American Lindsey Vonn has been stripped. Yes, it was determined that President Obama has been going downhill faster than she has."

(Laughter.) As Democrats and Republicans retreat to their corners, is the middle ground forever a lost? Covering the week: Gloria Borger of CNN, Alexis Simendinger of National Journal, Jackie Calmes of the New York Times, and Eamon Javers of Politico.

Today, American teenage girls compete on the athletic field and regularly outperform the boys in their classroom. But research shows that once girls reach puberty, their self-confidence can take a nose-dive. In this documentary from the producers of RAISING CAIN, best-selling author and girls expert Rachel Simmons embeds herself in the lives of four remarkable teenage girls - Analuz, Libby, Carla and Sonia - to explore their most personal thoughts and experiences as they face new challenges posed by cyber-bullying, increased violence, poor body image and the often rocky transition from girlhood to womanhood. Simmons reaches out to parents, psychologists, teachers and social workers to find out the best ways to nurture girls into capable, resilient adults.

Saving American Journalism. A radical plan to save journalism in America. Is good journalism going extinct? Fractured audiences and tight budgets have downsized or sunk many of the fourth estate's major battleships, including this very program. This week, NOW's David Brancaccio talks to Professor Bob McClesney and journalist John Nichols about the perils of a shrinking news media landscape, and their bold proposal to save journalism with government subsidies. Their new book is "The Death and Life of American Journalism: The Media Revolution that Will Begin the World Again." Should journalism get the next government bailout?

This program documents the inspirational odyssey of an Idaho schoolteacher's attempt to fly in space - a 23-year story of perseverance. From more than 11,000 applicants to the 1985 Teacher-in-Space program, McCall Elementary School teacher Barbara Morgan was chosen to be the backup to Christa McAuliffe. When McAuliffe is killed in the explosion of the space shuttle Challenger in 1986, Morgan's dream of flying is threatened. History dictates another course. Using rare footage, as well as interviews with Morgan and friends, colleagues, students and family, this film shows how Morgan becomes a full-fledged astronaut, overcoming additional, sometimes tragic, challenges. On August 8, 2007, Morgan and her crewmates triumphantly launched in the shuttle Endeavor.

On Canada's remote Ellesmere Island, where June is spring, July is summer and August is already autumn, the race is on for two remarkable species to raise their families. The white gyrfalcon is enormous, the largest and most powerful falcon in the world. Yet last summer, the nesting falcon pair on the island failed to raise any young. The rare Arctic wolves rely on every member of the pack to chase and bring down the prey that keep them alive. Last year was good for them and they raised three cubs. But for the wolves and the falcons, as well as the snowy owls, musk oxen, lemmings, Arctic foxes and hares who share this fragile ecosystem with them, fortunes are always precarious. What will happen this year?

The Drakensberg Mountains are southern Africa's Alps, rising more than 11,000 feet into the sky. But beneath their shimmering beauty lies an incredibly hostile environment for the creatures that manage to live there. Each Spring, drenching rains destroy the grasslands at the base of the mountains, and those who would survive must climb up sheer cliffs of volcanic rock, through gauntlets of storms and snow, to reach the carpets of new grass on the plateau. The baboons that make their home halfway up the heights may have the advantage of agility, but eland, the world's largest antelope, have long, spindly legs and heavy bodies, which make their climb to the top all but unbelievable. All have babies at their sides. And the vultures circle overhead.

The disaster in Haiti, the challenges of the past, the present, and the future, plus, populist politics at the White House and maybe in Massachusetts, too, tonight on Washington Week. President Barack Obama said, "To the people of Haiti we say clearly and with conviction you will not be forsaken. You will not be forgotten. In this, your hour of greatest need, America stands with you." A terrible earthquake. AMB. Raymond Alcide Joseph said, "It's a major catastrophe for Haiti." A devastating death toll. We need more people down here. Grief and uncertainty everywhere. President Bill Clinton said, "The most urgent thing we can do now is get them through the next week, eight to 10 days. We have to find the living and the dead and we have to take care of both." Can Haiti, plagued by decades of deprivation, survive? In Washington, the president talks tough to bankers paying themselves big bonuses. President Obama said, "We want our money back and we're going to get it." But will taxpayers still pay in the end? And in Massachusetts, a potential political upset that could undo Ted Kennedy's legacy. Covering the week, Helene Cooper of the New York Times, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, Deborah Solomon of the Wall Street Journal, and Dan Balz of the Washington Post. Plus, a special report from ABC's Martha Raddatz on the ground in Haiti.

From time immemorial, Native Americans have regarded the lands now called Yellowstone and Glacier as significant and sacred. Today, nearly 30 tribal nations maintain official ties to these national parks, and many tribal leaders consider ongoing Native involvement in these areas necessary to the long-term health of America's endangered indigenous cultures. In BEFORE THERE WERE PARKS: YELLOWSTONE AND GLACIER THROUGH NATIVE EYES, narrated by N. Scott Momaday, more than a dozen of these leaders and experts from across the region offer a respectful introduction to the knowledge that tribal people here have passed down for at least the past 12,000 years. Viewers discover why Glacier and Yellowstone are so important to American Indians - for reasons far beyond their recent status as National Parks.

Unique to North America, the bald eagle is the continent's most recognizable aerial predator, with a shocking white head, electric yellow beak and penetrating eyes. In the 1960s, this symbol of the United States became an emblem of environmental degradation, as the pesticide DDT and other human pressures brought it to the brink of extinction. Following their protection as an endangered species, bald eagles have come roaring back. Photographed by three-time Emmy-winning cinematographer Neil Rettig, this first-ever HD hour on bald eagles focuses on the drama of the nest. Even in the best of times, it's a surprisingly tough struggle to maintain a one-ton home and raise chicks until they can hunt on their own. This is an intimate portrait of these majestic raptors' lives in the wild.

What happens when two great predators come face to face in Yellowstone? The grizzly and the wolf. They couldn't be more different. The bear is a loner, ranging far and wide in search of a rich variety of resources. The wolf hunts to survive and finds its strength in speed and teamwork. Their strategies have taken them to the very top of Yellowstone, and it's no simple matter when they meet. In every encounter, the opposition must be measured, strengths must be tested, and risks must be carefully weighed. Each time, one of them will have a tactical advantage -- but which one, and when? What emerges as each remarkable scene unfolds, is the keen awareness that runs through all of Yellowstone. Elk and eagle, coyote and raven, otter and owl, every creature must assess, decide, and act. To fight or to flee? It's all in knowing your own strengths and limitations in the heat of the moment in Yellowstone.

The Balkan Peninsula is notorious for being one of the great battlegrounds of history. And yet, it possesses another side unknown to many, where ancient forests and vast wetlands harbor pristine wilderness, and sheer cliff walls and desolate plateaus preserve a seemingly unchanged past. Surveying these striking and stark landscapes, one might think they've ventured into the Middle-earth of J.R.R. Tolkien's Lord of the Rings. Indeed the Balkan Peninsula is home to a variety of regions that border on mythical. In Croatia's Kopacki Rit Wetlands, land mines keep people away, but enable native wildlife to thrive. Further south, Montenegro's Tara River carves through Europe's longest and deepest canyon, and neighboring forests provide refuge to rare animals such as the Balkan Lynx. To the east, millions of birds flock to the Danube Delta to feast on swarms of mosquitoes. And at the west of the Balkans is Skadar Lake, a remarkable landscape of peaks and water.

NOVA presents a comprehensive three-part, three-hour special-investigating explosive new discoveries that are transforming the picture of how we became human. The first program explores fresh clues about our earliest ancestors in Africa, including the stunningly complete fossil nicknamed "Lucy's Child." These three-million-year-old bones from Ethiopia reveal humanity's oldest and most telltale trait-upright walking rather than a big brain. The second program tackles the mysteries of how our ancestors managed to survive in a savannah teeming with vicious predators, and when and why we first left our African cradle to colonize every corner of the Earth. In the final program, NOVA probes a wave of dramatic new evidence, based partly on cutting-edge DNA analysis, that reveals new insights into how we became the creative and "behaviorally modern" humans of today, and what really happened to the enigmatic Neanderthals who faded into extinction. Shot "in the trenches" as discoveries were unearthed throughout Africa and Europe, each hour of Becoming Human unfolds with a forensic investigation into the life and death of a specific hominid ancestor, such as Lucy's Child. Dry bones spring back to vivid life with stunning animation, the product of a unique NOVA collaboration between top anthropologists and a talented team of movie animators.

Though they may look like dragons and inspire stories of man-eating, fire-spitting monsters with long claws, razor-sharp teeth and muscular, whip-like tails, these creatures are actually monitor lizards, the largest lizards to walk the planet. With their acute intelligence-including the ability to plan ahead-these lizards are a very different kind of reptile, blurring the line between reptiles and mammals. And even though these bizarre reptiles haven't changed all that much since the dinosaurs, they are a very successful species, versatile at adapting to all kinds of settings. Lizard Kings will look at what makes these tongued reptiles so similar to mammals and what has allowed them to become such unique survivors. But while the creatures can find their way around many different habitats, finding them is no easy task. Natural loners, and always on guard, they sense anything or anyone from hundreds of feet away. NOVA will follow expert lizard hunter Dr. Eric Pianka as he tracks the elusive creatures through Australia's heartland with cutting-edge "lizard cam" technology for an unparalleled close encounter with these amazingly versatile "living dragons."

Saving Haiti's Mothers. On the ground in Haiti, working to save the lives of mothers during childbirth. Haiti's catastrophic earthquake, in addition to leaving lives and institutions in ruin, also exacerbated a longtime lethal risk in Haiti: Dying during childbirth. Challenges in transportation, education, and quality health care contribute to Haiti having the highest maternal mortality rate in the Western Hemisphere, a national crisis even before the earthquake struck. While great strides are being made with global health issues like HIV/AIDS, maternal mortality figures worldwide have seen virtually no improvement in 20 years. Worldwide, over 500,000 women die each year during pregnancy. This week, a NOW team that had been working in Haiti during the earthquake reports on this deadly but correctable trend. They meet members of the Haitian Health Foundation (HHF), which operates a network of health agents in more than 100 villages, engaging in pre-natal visits, education, and emergency ambulance runs for pregnant women.

In 1851, word spreads across the country of a beautiful area of California's Yosemite Valley, attracting visitors who wish to exploit the land's scenery for commercial gain and those who wish to keep it pristine. Among the latter is a Scottish-born wanderer named John Muir, for whom protecting the land becomes a spiritual calling. In 1864, Congress passes an act that protects Yosemite from commercial development for "public use, resort and recreation" - the first time in world history that any government has put forth this idea - and hands control of the land to California. Meanwhile, a "wonderland" in the northwest corner of the Wyoming territory attracts visitors to its bizarre landscape of geysers, mud pots and sulfur pits. In 1872, Congress passes an act to protect this land as well. Since it is located in a territory, rather than a state, it becomes America's first national park: Yellowstone.

The disaster in Haiti, the challenges of the past, the present, and the future, plus, populist politics at the White House and maybe in Massachusetts, too, tonight on Washington Week. President Barack Obama said, "To the people of Haiti we say clearly and with conviction you will not be forsaken. You will not be forgotten. In this, your hour of greatest need, America stands with you." A terrible earthquake. AMB. Raymond Alcide Joseph said, "It's a major catastrophe for Haiti." A devastating death toll. We need more people down here. Grief and uncertainty everywhere. President Bill Clinton said, "The most urgent thing we can do now is get them through the next week, eight to 10 days. We have to find the living and the dead and we have to take care of both." Can Haiti, plagued by decades of deprivation, survive? In Washington, the president talks tough to bankers paying themselves big bonuses. President Obama said, "We want our money back and we're going to get it." But will taxpayers still pay in the end? And in Massachusetts, a potential political upset that could undo Ted Kennedy's legacy. Covering the week, Helene Cooper of the New York Times, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, Deborah Solomon of the Wall Street Journal, and Dan Balz of the Washington Post. From time immemorial, Native Americans have regarded the lands now called Yellowstone and Glacier as significant and sacred. Today, nearly 30 tribal nations maintain official ties to these national parks, and many tribal leaders consider ongoing Native involvement in these areas necessary to the long-term health of America's endangered indigenous cultures. In BEFORE THERE WERE PARKS: YELLOWSTONE AND GLACIER THROUGH NATIVE EYES, narrated by N. Scott Momaday, more than a dozen of these leaders and experts from across the region offer a respectful introduction to the knowledge that tribal people here have passed down for at least the past 12,000 years. Viewers discover why Glacier and Yellowstone are so important to American Indians -- for reasons far beyond their recent status as National Parks.

The Balkan Peninsula is notorious for being one of the great battlegrounds of history. And yet, it possesses another side unknown to many, where ancient forests and vast wetlands harbor pristine wilderness, and sheer cliff walls and desolate plateaus preserve a seemingly unchanged past. Surveying these striking and stark landscapes, one might think they've ventured into the Middle-earth of J.R.R. Tolkien's Lord of the Rings. Indeed the Balkan Peninsula is home to a variety of regions that border on mythical. In Croatia's Kopacki Rit Wetlands, land mines keep people away, but enable native wildlife to thrive. Further south, Montenegro's Tara River carves through Europe's longest and deepest canyon, and neighboring forests provide refuge to rare animals such as the Balkan Lynx. To the east, millions of birds flock to the Danube Delta to feast on swarms of mosquitoes. And at the west of the Balkans is Skadar Lake, a remarkable landscape of peaks and water.

In 1851, word spreads across the country of a beautiful area of California's Yosemite Valley, attracting visitors who wish to exploit the land's scenery for commercial gain and those who wish to keep it pristine. Among the latter is a Scottish-born wanderer named John Muir, for whom protecting the land becomes a spiritual calling. In 1864, Congress passes an act that protects Yosemite from commercial development for "public use, resort and recreation" - the first time in world history that any government has put forth this idea - and hands control of the land to California. Meanwhile, a "wonderland" in the northwest corner of the Wyoming territory attracts visitors to its bizarre landscape of geysers, mud pots and sulfur pits. In 1872, Congress passes an act to protect this land as well. Since it is located in a territory, rather than a state, it becomes America's first national park: Yellowstone.

By the end of the 19th century, widespread industrialization has left many Americans worried about whether the country - once a vast wilderness - will have any pristine land left. At the same time, poachers in the parks are rampant, and visitors think nothing of littering or carving their names near iconic sites like Old Faithful. Congress has yet to establish clear judicial authority or appropriations for the protection of the parks. This sparks a conservation movement by organizations such as the Sierra Club, led by John Muir; the Audubon Society, led by George Bird Grinnell; and the Boone and Crockett Club, led by Theodore Roosevelt. The movement fails, however, to stop

San Francisco from building the Hetch Hetchy dam at Yosemite, flooding Muir's "mountain temple" and leaving him broken-hearted before he dies.

In the early 20th century, America has a dozen national parks, but they are a haphazard patchwork of special places under the supervision of different federal agencies. The conservation movement, after failing to stop the Hetch Hetchy dam, pushes the government to establish one unified agency to oversee all the parks, leading to the establishment of the National Park Service in 1916. Its first director, Stephen Mather, a wealthy businessman and passionate park advocate who fought vigorously to establish the NPS, launches an energetic campaign to expand the national park system and bring more visitors to the parks. Among his efforts is to protect the Grand Canyon from encroaching commercial interests and establish it as a national park, rather than a national monument.

As the first wolves reintroduced into Yellowstone, the Druids are the most celebrated wolf pack in North America. Pioneers in the wilderness, they were at the heart of a massive scientific experiment to restore an entire ecosystem that began to break down without its wolves. Emmy Award-winning filmmaker Bob Landis spent more than three years with these remarkable wolves, creating a spectacularly dramatic and intimate record of their lives, their great battles with rival wolf packs and the changing fortunes of the coyotes and foxes who share their home range in Yellowstone's beautiful Lamar Valley.

Florida's Everglades National Park is one of the last great wildlife refuges in the United States, home to numerous unique and endangered mammals, trees, plants, birds and turtles, as well as half a million alligators. However, the Everglades is also the dumping ground for many animal invaders more than 15 species of parrot, 75 kinds of fish and 30 different reptiles from places as far away as Africa, Asia and the Caribbean. All of the intruders found their way into the park either by accidental escape from pet owners or intentional release by people no longer wishing to care for an exotic species. Add to the mix tens of thousands of giant pythons, snakes that can grow to 20 feet and weigh nearly 300 pounds, some released into the wild by irresponsible pet owners, some escapees from almost 200 wildlife facilities destroyed by Hurricane Andrew in 1992. The predatory pythons slithered into this protected wilderness and thrived, and the refuge has consequently become less a haven than a killing ground every day since then.

In collaboration with National Geographic, NOVA follows the exploits of acclaimed photojournalist James Balog and a scientific team as they deploy time-lapse cameras in risky, remote locations in the Arctic, Alaska, and the Alps. Grappling with blizzards, fickle technology, and climbs up craggy precipices, the team must anchor cameras capable of withstanding sub-zero temperatures and winds up to 170 mph. The goal of Balog's team's perilous expedition: to create a unique photo archive of melting glaciers that could provide a key to understanding their runaway behavior and their potential to drive rising sea levels. Some models now project a one-meter sea level rise over the next century, which could displace millions of people everywhere from Florida to Bangladesh and require trillions of dollars in new coastal infrastructure investments. But, alarmingly, these models don't reflect recent findings that glaciers in Greenland and Antarctica are melting at an ever-faster rate. What explains this alarming acceleration, and just how do you figure out what's happening inside a gigantic wall of ice? In this high-action scientific adventure, NOVA investigates the mystery of the mighty ice sheets that will affect the fate of coastlines around the world.

In May 2008, a scientific team made worldwide headlines by announcing evidence of a previously unsuspected impact from space that had devastated prehistoric North America at the end of the last Ice Age. According to this controversial new claim, the extinction of more than 34 types of large prehistoric animals (or "megafauna") was caused not by climate change or the arrival of the first human hunters, but by the massive breakup of a comet over the Great Lakes region. NOVA explores this provocative new theory about what killed off America's mammoths and may have come close to extinguishing early human populations as well.

Hunting Wolves, Saving Wolves. Is the Obama Administration breaking its promise to protect endangered species? Last year the Obama Administration removed federal protection from some of the wolves that had been restored to the northern Rockies under the Endangered Species Act. The move paved the way for controversial state-regulated wolf hunts. Wolf advocates strongly oppose the administration's decision saying the three states in the region, Montana, Idaho, and Wyoming need a cohesive management plan that allows for a much larger wolf population. "It was very disappointing when Secretary Salazar in the Obama Administration, signed off on this rushed-through Bush administration delisting package for wolves," said Doug Honnold, a lawyer with Earthjustice, who is representing conservation groups challenging the government's decision. The return of the gray wolf to the northern Rockies is considered to be the most successful wildlife reintroduction project in the history of the 27 year old Endangered Species Act. In 1995 and 1996, 66 gray wolves were relocated from Canada to Yellowstone National Park and central Idaho. Today there are more than 1,600 wolves in the region. For its part the federal government says that just 300 wolves are needed for legitimate recovery in the region. "Wolves are back and there's plenty of them in plenty of places. They're never really going anywhere," said Ed Bangs, the Northern Rockies Wolf Recovery Coordinator for the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service. More than a dozen conservation groups have sued the Interior Department to return federal protection to the northern Rockies wolves. Some believe the result of this legal debate is a litmus test for the Obama Administration's overall approach to wildlife issues and the Endangered Species Act.

While visiting the parks was once predominantly the domain of Americans wealthy enough to afford the high-priced train tours, the advent of the automobile allows more people than ever before to visit the parks. Mather embraces this opportunity and works to build more roads in the parks. Some park enthusiasts, such as Margaret and Edward Gehrke of Nebraska, begin "collecting" parks, making a point to visit as many as they can. In North Carolina, Horace Kephart, a reclusive writer, and George Masa, a Japanese immigrant, launch a campaign to protect the last strands of virgin forest in the Smoky Mountains by establishing it as a park. In Wyoming, John D. Rockefeller Jr. begins quietly buying up land in the Teton Mountain Range and valley in a secret plan to donate it to the government as a park.

In the midst of an economic catastrophe and then a world war, the national parks provide a source of much-needed jobs and then much-needed peace; the park idea changes to include new places and new ways of thinking; and in Wyoming, battle lines are drawn along the front of the Teton Range. To battle unemployment in the Great Depression, Franklin D. Roosevelt creates the Civilian Conservation Corps, which spawns a "golden age" for the parks through major renovation projects. In a groundbreaking study, a young NPS biologist named George Melendez Wright discovers widespread abuses of animal habitats and pushes the service to reform its wildlife policies. Congress narrowly passes a bill to protect the Everglades in Florida as a national park - the first time a park has been created solely to preserve an ecosystem, as opposed to scenic beauty. As America becomes entrenched in World War II, Roosevelt is pressured to open the parks to mining, grazing and lumbering. The president also is subjected to a storm of criticism for expanding the Grand Teton National Park in Wyoming by accepting a gift of land secretly purchased by John D. Rockefeller Jr.

The Outer Banks of North Carolina are a slim and moving line of sand in the open Atlantic. Many travelers think they know these islands, but south of Ocracoke Inlet there rises a luminous bar of sand 60 miles in extent, with no roads, no bridges and no hotels. These are the wild beaches of Cape Lookout -- one of the few remaining natural barrier islands in the world. At once an exaltation and elegy, "Ribbon of Sand" profiles this seascape and the transitory islands that are doomed to disappear. Meryl Streep reads excerpts from Rachel Carson's writings.

Filmmaker John Grabowska presents a lyrical interpretation of the sweeping geologic story of Yellowstone, the world's first and most famous national park. Formation of glaciers, mountain ranges and the gigantic caldera of a supervolcano provide the saga of this special place. Filmed over two years through all seasons, the film delves deeply into the significance behind the scenery and illuminates the intimate bonds between the landscape and biology - how Yellowstone's geology influences where life exists and how it evolves. A short concluding film, "Yellowstone's Cascade Corner," features the portion of Yellowstone extending across the southwestern border of Montana into Idaho.

On Thin Ice. Two men on a remarkable journey high in the Himalayas investigate threats to global water and food supply. Seventy-five percent of the world's fresh water is stored in glaciers, but scientists predict climate change will cause some of the world's largest glaciers to completely melt by 2030. What effect will this have on our daily lives, especially our water and food supply? With global warming falling low on a national list of American concerns, it's time to take a deeper look at what could be a global calamity in the making. This week, David Brancaccio and environmentalist Conrad Anker--one of the world's leading high altitude climbers--trek to the Gangotri Glacier in the Himalayan Mountains, the source of the Ganges River, to witness the great melt and its dire consequences first-hand. The two also visit Montana's Glacier National Park to see the striking effects of global warming closer to home and learn how melting glaciers across the world can have a direct impact on food prices in the U.S. Along the way, Brancaccio and Anker bathe in the River Ganges, view a water shortage calamity in India, and see with their own eyes and cameras the tangible costs of climate change. "We can't take climate change and put it on the back burner," warns Anker. "If we don't address climate change, we won't be around as humans."

A stubborn iconoclast fights a lonely battle on behalf of a species nearly everyone hates; America's "Last Frontier" becomes a testing ground for the future of the park idea; and in unprecedented numbers, American families create unforgettable memories, passing on a love of the parks to the next generation. Following World War II, the parks are overwhelmed as visitation reaches 62 million people a year. A new billion-dollar campaign -- Mission 66 -- is created to build facilities and infrastructure that can accommodate the flood of visitors. A biologist named Alfred Murie introduces the revolutionary notion that predatory animals, which are still hunted, deserve the same protection as other wildlife. In Florida, Lancelot Jones, the grandson of a slave, refuses to sell to developers his family's property on a string of unspoiled islands in Biscayne Bay and instead sells it to the federal government to be protected as a national monument. In the late 1970s, President Jimmy Carter creates an uproar in Alaska when he sets aside 56 million acres of land for preservation - the largest expansion of protected land in history. In 1995, wolves are re-established in Yellowstone, making the world's first national park a little more like what it once was.

The Outer Banks of North Carolina are a slim and moving line of sand in the open Atlantic. Many travelers think they know these islands, but south of Ocracoke Inlet there rises a luminous bar of sand 60 miles in extent, with no roads, no bridges and no hotels. These are the wild beaches of Cape Lookout -- one of the few remaining natural barrier islands in the world. At once an exaltation and elegy, "Ribbon of Sand" profiles this seascape and the transitory islands that are doomed to disappear. Meryl Streep reads excerpts from Rachel Carson's writings.

John James Audubon - whose name became synonymous with American conservation - killed thousands of birds during his quest to create Birds of America, arguably the largest and most beautiful book of the 19th century. Audubon was at once entrepreneur, artist, scientist, husband, father, legend - and walking contradiction. Born in what is now Haiti, the illegitimate son of a French plantation owner and his mistress, Audubon ultimately became the quintessential American pioneer. On the frontier, he played the debonair European. In the drawing rooms of Europe, he acted the part of wild woodsman. Although faithful to his long-suffering wife, he nonetheless wrote her lengthy letters bursting with details of his encounters with other women. Jailed once for bankruptcy, he went on to dine at the White House. The self-taught artist and self-made man was praised by royalty, shunned by his in-laws and blackballed by the Philadelphia Academy of Natural Sciences. AMERICAN MASTERS "John James Audubon: Drawn From Nature," details Audubon's epic adventures while capturing the full-scale beauty of his definitive book.

In the animal world females often call the shots. But their decisions may be surprising. In an effort to understand the mating game, NATURE follows biologist Chadden Hunter, PhD, through the Simien Mountains of northern Ethiopia, as he observes a troop of geladas, close cousins of baboons. He found that in gelada society females make all the decisions about mating, even though males are twice their size. The males are evaluated on everything from body heat to baby sitting skills. And once selected, no male gelada can ever rest on his laurels. Another male is always auditioning for his job. You'll also see female barn swallows that choose a male by the color of his chest and encounter a robotic sage grouse that is helping researchers learn about this species' elaborate courtship displays.

"Gasland." Will the boom in natural gas drilling contaminate America's water supply? In the debate over energy resources, natural gas is often considered a "lesser-of-evils". While it does release some greenhouse gases, natural gas burns cleaner than coal and oil, and is in plentiful supply--parts of the U.S. sit above some of the largest natural gas reserves on Earth. But a new boom in natural gas drilling, a process called "fracking," raises concerns about health and environmental risks. This week, NOW talks with filmmaker Josh Fox about "Gasland", his Sundance award-winning documentary on the surprising consequences of natural gas drilling. Fox's film--inspired when the gas company came to his hometown--alleges chronic illness, animal-killing toxic waste, disastrous explosions, and regulatory missteps.

Happy New Year, but before we look ahead, we take a look back, tonight on Washington Week. A thwarted attempt to blow a plane from the sky revives old fears about terrorism and the tradeoffs we make to feel safe. President Barack Obama said, "This was a serious reminder of the dangers that we face and the nature of those who threaten our homeland." Rep. Pete Hoekstra (R-MI) said, "The threat to the United States is real. I think this administration has downplayed it. They need to recognize it." At the end of the year and the end of a decade, a new scare. Michael Duffy of Time Magazine provides context. Then, a roundtable with three Washington Week panelists whose books tell us much about the year just passed and the year to come. Dan Balz, author of "The Battle for America 2008," the story of the election. Joan Biskupic, author of "American Original," a biography of Supreme Court Justice Antonin Scalia. And David Sanger, author of "The Inheritance," a look at the challenges of our foreign policy.

Missed cues, intelligence failures, political upheaval, and health-care deal making. Welcome to a busy new year tonight on Washington Week, now in HD. President Barack Obama said, "Ultimately the buck stops with me. As president, I have a solemn responsibility to protect our nation and our people. And when the system fails, it is my responsibility." John Brennan said, "I told the president today, I let him down. I told him that I will do better and we will do better as a team." At the end of the week, one thing's clear. There is plenty of blame to go around as officials search for explanations at the White House, in a Detroit courtroom, on Capitol Hill, and at the Central Intelligence Agency, mourning the loss of seven of its own in Afghanistan. On the domestic front, politics rules the day as leading Democrats leave the fray. Sen. Chris Dodd (D-CT) said, "There are moments for each elected public official to step aside and let someone else step up. This is my moment to step aside." And health care negotiations go behind closed doors. Sen. Harry Reid (D-NV) said, "Mr. President, I'm sorry to say that for first time in American history, for the first time in American history a political party has chosen to stand on the sidelines." Sen. Orrin Hatch (R-UT) said, "I don't think we're on the sidelines in any way, shape, or form." Partisanship hard at work. We cover the week with Peter Baker of the New York Times, Tom Gjelten of National Public Radio, James Barnes of National Journal, and Ceci Connolly of the Washington Post.

The disaster in Haiti, the challenges of the past, the present, and the future, plus, populist politics at the White House and maybe in Massachusetts, too, tonight on Washington Week. President Barack Obama said, "To the people of Haiti we say clearly and with conviction you will not be forsaken. You will not be forgotten. In this, your hour of greatest need, America stands with you." A terrible earthquake. AMB. Raymond Alcide Joseph said, "It's a major catastrophe for Haiti." A devastating death toll. We need more people down here. Grief and uncertainty everywhere. President Bill Clinton said, "The most urgent thing we can do now is get them through the next week, eight to 10 days. We have to find the living and the dead and we have to take care of both." Can Haiti, plagued by decades of deprivation, survive? In Washington, the president talks tough to bankers paying themselves big bonuses. President Obama said, "We want our money back and we're going to get it." But will taxpayers still pay in the end? And in Massachusetts, a potential political upset that could undo Ted Kennedy's legacy. Covering the week, Helene Cooper of the New York Times, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, Deborah Solomon of the Wall Street Journal, and Dan Balz of the Washington Post. Plus, a special report from ABC's Martha Raddatz on the ground in Haiti.

As credit card companies face rising public anger, new regulation from Washington, and a potential perfect storm of economic bad news, FRONTLINE correspondent Lowell Bergman examines the future of the massive consumer loan industry and its impact on a fragile national economy. In a joint project with the New York Times--a follow-up to the Secret History of the Credit Card--Bergman and the Times talk to industry insiders, lobbyists, politicians, and consumer advocates as they square off over new regulation and the possible creation of a consumer finance protection agency. How are the credit, debit, and pre-paid card industries repositioning themselves to maintain high profits under the new rules? The stakes couldn't be higher as many fear the consumer loan industry could be at the center of the next crisis.

In 1851, word spreads across the country of a beautiful area of California's Yosemite Valley, attracting visitors who wish to exploit the land's scenery for commercial gain and those who wish to keep it pristine. Among the latter is a Scottish-born wanderer named John Muir, for whom protecting the land becomes a spiritual calling. In 1864, Congress passes an act that protects Yosemite from commercial development for "public use, resort and recreation" - the first time in world history that any government has put forth this idea - and hands control of the land to California. Meanwhile, a "wonderland" in the northwest corner of the Wyoming territory attracts visitors to its bizarre landscape of geysers, mud pots and sulfur pits. In 1872, Congress passes an act to protect this land as well. Since it is located in a territory, rather than a state, it becomes America's first national park: Yellowstone.

The disaster in Haiti, the challenges of the past, the present, and the future, plus, populist politics at the White House and maybe in Massachusetts, too, tonight on Washington Week. President Barack Obama said, "To the people of Haiti we say clearly and with conviction you will not be forsaken. You will not be forgotten. In this, your hour of greatest need, America stands with you." A terrible earthquake. AMB. Raymond Alcide Joseph said, "It's a major catastrophe for Haiti." A devastating death toll. We need more people down here. Grief and uncertainty everywhere. President Bill Clinton said, "The most urgent thing we can do now is get them through the next week, eight to 10 days. We have to find the living and the dead and we have to take care of both." Can Haiti, plagued by decades of deprivation, survive? In Washington, the president talks tough to bankers paying themselves big bonuses. President Obama said, "We want our money back and we're going to get it." But will taxpayers still pay in the end? And in Massachusetts, a potential political upset that could undo Ted Kennedy's legacy. Covering the week, Helene Cooper of the New York Times, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, Deborah Solomon of the Wall Street Journal, and Dan Balz of the Washington Post. Plus, a special report from ABC's Martha Raddatz on the ground in Haiti.

Chaos on the Potomac, the Supreme Court guts campaign finance limits. Massachusetts elects a Republican senator, health care reform's on life support, plus we bring you an eye witness report on Haiti, tonight on Washington Week. Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "Let the American people decide how much money is enough. Sunshine really does work if you allow it to." Sen. Chuck Schumer (D-NY) said, "The Roberts court has turned back the clock on our democracy by over a century." In one major decision the Supreme Court rolls back decades of campaign finance limits. While political upheaval of another kind rocks the capital after Massachusetts voters picked Republican Scott Brown. Sen. Scott Brown (R-MA) said, "I think they sent a very, very powerful message that business as usual is not going to be the way we do it." How much will the 41st Republican senator weaken the president's agenda? President Barack Obama said, "It's just nice being out of Washington. Let me say. There're some nice people in Washington, but they can drive you crazy." And amid aftershocks and confusion, the world copes with the devastation in Haiti. Covering the week, Joan Biskupic of USA Today, John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times, Alexis Simendinger of National Journal, and Martha Raddatz of ABC News.

The State of the Union, divided, united, anxious, worried, or all of the above? We consider all the options tonight on Washington Week. President Barack Obama said, "We don't quit. I don't quit." The president's big speech casts a spotlight on a critical political dilemma. President Obama said, "We have to recognize that we face more than a deficit of dollars right now. We face a deficit of trust." He took on Washington. President Obama said, "What frustrates the American people is a Washington where every day is Election Day." But blamed his own failings on poor communication. President Obama said, "I take my share of the blame for not explaining it more clearly to the American people." And today the president took his complaint directly to his most consistent detractors, House Republicans. Rep. Jason Chaffetz (R-UT) said, "I am one of 22 House freshmen. We didn't create this mess, but we are here to help clean it up." So what happens now? On job creation? On health care? On bipartisanship? Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "We're going to look for common ground, but we're not going to roll over on our principles." After a year of modest successes and setbacks, we assess the State of the Union with the reporters covering the week: Peter Baker of the New York Times, Dan Balz of the Washington Post, Gloria Borger of CNN, and John Harris of Politico.

On August 25, 2008, just two months after undergoing surgery for a malignant brain tumor, "The Lion of the Senate" and the Kennedy family's lone male survivor -- Edward M. Kennedy -- surprised attendees with an unscheduled speech at the Democratic National Convention in Denver, Colorado. "As I look ahead, I am strengthened by family and friendship. So many of you have been with me in the happiest days and the hardest days. Together we have known success and seen setbacks, victory and defeat," Kennedy said. The Kennedy story is unlike any other: a saga of ambition, wealth, family loyalty and personal tragedy. From patriarch Joseph Kennedy's rise on Wall Street and frustrations in politics, John Kennedy's march to the White House, Robert Kennedy's near-certain presidential victory, preempted only by his tragic death, through Edward Kennedy's withdrawal from the 1980 Presidential race following the scandal of Chappaquiddick, the family legacy continues to influence politics.

One year after the deadliest domestic airline accident in seven years, FRONTLINE investigates the crash of Continental 3407 in Buffalo, NY, and discovers a dramatically changed airline industry, where regional carriers now account for half of the nation's daily departures. The rise of the regionals and arrival of low-cost carriers have been a huge boon to consumers, and the industry insists that the skies remain safe. But many insiders are worried that now, thirty years after airline deregulation, the aviation system is being stretched beyond its capacity to deliver service that is both cheap and safe.

Democrats and the New Politics of Abortion. Has the Democratic Party abandoned support of reproductive rights? To gain their historic control of Congress, Democrats fielded moderate candidates who didn't always follow the party line, especially when it came to abortion. Now that the Democratic Party has the legislative upper hand, are they willing to negotiate away reproductive rights for other political gains? This week, NOW goes to Allentown, Pennsylvania to ask: Are abortion rights now in jeopardy at the very hands of the party that has historically protected them? Among those interviewed are pro-life Democratic U.S. Representative Bart Stupak and former DNC Chairman Howard Dean.

In 1851, word spreads across the country of a beautiful area of California's Yosemite Valley, attracting visitors who wish to exploit the land's scenery for commercial gain and those who wish to keep it pristine. Among the latter is a Scottish-born wanderer named John Muir, for whom protecting the land becomes a spiritual calling. In 1864, Congress passes an act that protects Yosemite from commercial development for "public use, resort and recreation" - the first time in world history that any government has put forth this idea - and hands control of the land to California. Meanwhile, a "wonderland" in the northwest corner of the Wyoming territory attracts visitors to its bizarre landscape of geysers, mud pots and sulfur pits. In 1872, Congress passes an act to protect this land as well. Since it is located in a territory, rather than a state, it becomes America's first national park: Yellowstone.

By the end of the 19th century, widespread industrialization has left many Americans worried about whether the country - once a vast wilderness - will have any pristine land left. At the same time, poachers in the parks are rampant, and visitors think nothing of littering or carving their names near iconic sites like Old Faithful. Congress has yet to establish clear judicial authority or appropriations for the protection of the parks. This sparks a conservation movement by organizations such as the Sierra Club, led by John Muir; the Audubon Society, led by George Bird Grinnell; and the Boone and Crockett Club, led by Theodore Roosevelt. The movement fails, however, to stop San Francisco from building the Hetch Hetchy dam at Yosemite, flooding Muir's "mountain temple" and leaving him broken-hearted before he dies.

In the early 20th century, America has a dozen national parks, but they are a haphazard patchwork of special places under the supervision of different federal agencies. The conservation movement, after failing to stop the Hetch Hetchy dam, pushes the government to establish one unified agency to oversee all the parks, leading to the establishment of the National Park Service in 1916. Its first director, Stephen Mather, a wealthy businessman and passionate park advocate who fought vigorously to establish the NPS, launches an energetic campaign to expand the national park system and bring more visitors to the parks. Among his efforts is to protect the Grand Canyon from encroaching commercial interests and establish it as a national park, rather than a national monument.

Deficits and priorities, the beginning and the end of bipartisanship, gays in the military, and the politics of terror, tonight on Washington Week. Peter Orszag said, "One of the lingering problems in our financial markets, however, is access to credit for small businesses. That's why in this budget..." Sen. Judd Gregg (R-NH) said, "No, no, no, you can't make that type of statement with any legitimacy." Fireworks at a budget hearing? Fresh signs of broad disagreements in Washington, over spending and debt. President Barack Obama said, "We simply cannot continue to spend as if debts just don't have consequences." Over the balance of power and politics. Sen. Scott Brown (R-MA) said, "I'm hopeful that there'll be bipartisan negotiations. That's part of the problem, the fact that there is--it was always 60-40, 60-40. Over who gets to serve his or her country. Adm. Mike Mullen said, "I cannot escape being troubled by the fact that we have in place a policy which forces young men and women to lie about who they are in order to defend their fellow citizens." And over who gets prosecuted for terrorism and how. Sen. Lindsey Graham (R-SC) said, "I believe it is inappropriate to give the mastermind of 9/11 full constitutional rights of an American citizen." Washington at war. We sort through it all with the reporters covering the week: Jackie Calmes of the New York Times, Michael Duffy of Time Magazine, Nancy Youssef of McClatchy Newspapers, and Pete Williams of NBC News.

Democrats and Republicans jockey for position in Washington, while Americans at home grow increasingly disenchanted with the spectacle. We look at the fallout, tonight on Washington Week. Pres. Barack Obama said, "I understand that McConnell and Reid are out doing snow angels on the South Lawn together." Well, not exactly. Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "Why are we going to talk about a bill that can't pass?" Sen. Mitch McConnell (R-KY) said, "What we need to do is start over." Bipartisanship remains elusive on the issues of the day, including how to fix health care and how to create jobs. Sen. Harry Reid (D-NV) said, "We feel that the American people need a message. The message that they need is that we're doing something about jobs." But as Americans clearly lose patience with their government, some are lining up to capitalize on that discontent. Former Gov. Sarah Palin said, "How's that hopey, changey stuff working out for you?" While discontent of another type roils Iran. We look at the week with the reporters covering the stories: Dan Balz of the Washington Post, Naftali Bendavid of the Wall Street Journal, Janet Hook of the Los Angeles Times, and David Sanger of the New York Times.

On August 25, 2008, just two months after undergoing surgery for a malignant brain tumor, "The Lion of the Senate" and the Kennedy family's lone male survivor -- Edward M. Kennedy -- surprised attendees with an unscheduled speech at the Democratic National Convention in Denver, Colorado. "As I look ahead, I am strengthened by family and friendship. So many of you have been with me in the happiest days and the hardest days. Together we have known success and seen setbacks, victory and defeat," Kennedy said. The Kennedy story is unlike any other: a saga of ambition, wealth, family loyalty and personal tragedy. From patriarch Joseph Kennedy's rise on Wall Street and frustrations in politics, John Kennedy's march to the White House, Robert Kennedy's near-certain presidential victory, preempted only by his tragic death, through Edward Kennedy's withdrawal from the 1980 Presidential race following the scandal of Chappaquiddick, the family legacy continues to influence politics.

Angry Voters. Will angry voters toss out the incumbents this fall? From the raucous Tea Party rallies to the painful sacrifices families are making behind closed doors, voter angst and anger are sweeping the country like a storm. Directly in its path: the 2010 midterm elections. This week, NOW examines the strong impact this groundswell has already had on electoral politics, and what we can expect in November. Our investigation uncovers what motivates people who've come together under the Tea Party banner, and how a larger national voter dissatisfaction spells trouble for incumbents in both parties.

Hunting Wolves, Saving Wolves. Is the Obama Administration breaking its promise to protect endangered species? Last year the Obama Administration removed federal protection from some of the wolves that had been restored to the northern Rockies under the Endangered Species Act. The move paved the way for controversial state-regulated wolf hunts. Wolf advocates strongly oppose the administrations decision saying the three states in the region, Montana, Idaho, and Wyoming need a cohesive management plan that allows for a much larger wolf population. "It was very disappointing when Secretary Salazar in the Obama Administration, signed off on this rushed-through Bush administration delisting package for wolves," said Doug Honnold, a lawyer with Earthjustice, who is representing conservation groups challenging the government's decision. The return of the gray wolf to the northern Rockies is considered to be the most successful wildlife reintroduction project in the history of the 27 year old Endangered Species Act. In 1995 and 1996, 66 gray wolves were relocated from Canada to Yellowstone National Park and central Idaho. Today there are more than 1,600 wolves in the region. For its part the federal government says that just 300 wolves are needed for legitimate recovery in the region. "Wolves are back and there's plenty of them in plenty of places. They're never really going anywhere," said Ed Bangs, the Northern Rockies Wolf Recovery Coordinator for the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service. More than a dozen conservation groups have sued the Interior Department to return federal protection to the northern Rockies wolves. Some believe the result of this legal debate is a litmus test for the Obama Administration's overall approach to wildlife issues and the Endangered Species Act.

While visiting the parks was once predominantly the domain of Americans wealthy enough to afford the high-priced train tours, the advent of the automobile allows more people than ever before to visit the parks. Mather embraces this opportunity and works to build more roads in the parks. Some park enthusiasts, such as Margaret and Edward Gehrke of Nebraska, begin "collecting" parks, making a point to visit as many as they can. In North Carolina, Horace Kephart, a reclusive writer, and George Masa, a Japanese immigrant, launch a campaign to protect the last strands of virgin forest in the Smoky Mountains by establishing it as a park. In Wyoming, John D. Rockefeller Jr. begins quietly buying up land in the Teton Mountain Range and valley in a secret plan to donate it to the government as a park.

In the midst of an economic catastrophe and then a world war, the national parks provide a source of much-needed jobs and then much-needed peace; the park idea changes to include new places and new ways of thinking; and in Wyoming, battle lines are drawn along the front of the Teton Range. To battle unemployment in the Great Depression, Franklin D. Roosevelt creates the Civilian Conservation Corps, which spawns a "golden age" for the parks through major renovation projects. In a groundbreaking study, a young NPS biologist named George Melendez Wright discovers widespread abuses of animal habitats and pushes the service to reform its wildlife policies. Congress narrowly passes a bill to protect the Everglades in Florida as a national park - the first time a park has been created solely to preserve an ecosystem, as opposed to scenic beauty. As America becomes entrenched in World War II, Roosevelt is pressured to open the parks to mining, grazing and lumbering. The president also is subjected to a storm of criticism for expanding the Grand Teton National Park in Wyoming by accepting a gift of land secretly purchased by John D. Rockefeller Jr.

Is Washington broken? And if it is, who's supposed to fix it? How an Indiana senator shook up the capital, what it means for Democrats, Republicans, and for you, tonight on Washington Week. Sen. Evan Bayh (D-IN) said, "We've got a lot of good people in Congress, but they're trapped in a dysfunctional system." If Congress is indeed dysfunctional, is the answer to flee? Rep. Lincoln Diaz-

Balart (R-FL) said, "I will not seek a 10th term in the United States Congress this November." Rep. Patrick Kennedy (D-RI) said, "My life has taken a new direction and I will not be a candidate for reelection this year." With the White House agenda on the ropes, the President searches for the bright side. Pres. Barack Obama said, "One year later, it is largely thanks to the Recovery Act that a second depression is no longer a possibility." But has the opposition finally found its voice? Mitt Romney said, "The gold medal that was won last night by American Lindsey Vonn has been stripped. Yes, it was determined that President Obama has been going downhill faster than she has." (Laughter.) As Democrats and Republicans retreat to their corners, is the middle ground forever a lost? You want to know what really happened at the big health care summit, whether the economy is turning the corner, if your Toyota is safe? We'll answer your questions tonight on Washington Week. Rep. Joe Barton (R-TX) said, "Never have so many members of the House and Senate behaved so well for so long before so many television cameras." They did behave well, but they did not agree. Sen. Mitch McConnell (R-KY) said, "The solution to that is to put that on the shelf and to start over with a blank piece of paper." Sen. Max Baucus (D-MT) said, "The gaps in my judgment are not that great." Honest differences of opinion or rank partisanship. Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "Both of us during the campaign promised change in Washington." President Barack Obama said, "Let me just make this point, John, because we're not campaigning anymore. The election's over." Sen. McCain replied, "I'm reminded of that every day." One almost certain casualty: bipartisanship. But is there room for cross party cooperation on another key issue? The yeas are 70. The nays are 28. The Senate passes a jobs bill. And one of the world's most powerful businessmen receives a congressional scolding. Rep. Edolphus Towns (D-NY) said, "If the Camry and the Prius were airplanes, they would be grounded." Trouble at Toyota. Covering the week: Karen Tumulty of Time Magazine, John Dickerson of Slate Magazine and CBS News, Naftali Bendavid of the Wall Street Journal, and David Shepardson of the Detroit News.

In the midst of an economic catastrophe and then a world war, the national parks provide a source of much-needed jobs and then much-needed peace; the park idea changes to include new places and new ways of thinking; and in Wyoming, battle lines are drawn along the front of the Teton Range. To battle unemployment in the Great Depression, Franklin D. Roosevelt creates the Civilian Conservation Corps, which spawns a "golden age" for the parks through major renovation projects. In a groundbreaking study, a young NPS biologist named George Melendez Wright discovers widespread abuses of animal habitats and pushes the service to reform its wildlife policies. Congress narrowly passes a bill to protect the Everglades in Florida as a national park - the first time a park has been created solely to preserve an ecosystem, as opposed to scenic beauty. As America becomes entrenched in World War II, Roosevelt is pressured to open the parks to mining, grazing and lumbering. The president also is subjected to a storm of criticism for expanding the Grand Teton National Park in Wyoming by accepting a gift of land secretly purchased by John D. Rockefeller Jr.

A stubborn iconoclast fights a lonely battle on behalf of a species nearly everyone hates; America's "Last Frontier" becomes a testing ground for the future of the park idea; and in unprecedented numbers, American families create unforgettable memories, passing on a love of the parks to the next generation. Following World War II, the parks are overwhelmed as visitation reaches 62 million people a year. A new billion-dollar campaign -- Mission 66 -- is created to build facilities and infrastructure that can accommodate the flood of visitors. A biologist named Alfred Murie introduces the revolutionary notion that predatory animals, which are still hunted, deserve the same protection as other wildlife. In Florida, Lancelot Jones, the grandson of a slave, refuses to sell to developers his family's property on a string of unspoiled islands in Biscayne Bay and instead sells it to the federal government to be protected as a national monument. In the late 1970s, President Jimmy Carter creates an uproar in Alaska when he sets aside 56 million acres of land for preservation - the largest expansion of protected land in history. In 1995, wolves are re-established in Yellowstone, making the world's first national park a little more like what it once was.

Crazy consequential politics, a stew of ultimatum, accusation and policy prescription. We cover it all tonight on Washington Week. President Barack Obama said, "No matter which approach you favor, I believe the United States Congress owes the American people a final vote on healthcare reform." Sen. Mitch McConnell (R-KY) [Senate Minority Leader] said, "The only thing that will be bipartisan about this proposal is the opposition to it." Healthcare heads towards high noon. Will the president's plan to forge ahead without Republican support work? Should it? Plus, what are they putting in the political water? The House Ways and Means Committee chairman steps aside. Rep. Charles Rangel (D-NY) said, "I should not do anything that would impede the success of other Democrats." A freshman lawmaker quits under a cloud. New York's governor teeters on the edge of resignation. Gov. David Paterson (D-NY) said, "When the truth comes out, I'm confident that I'll be vindicated." And a retiring Republican holds the Senate hostage for days over a jobs bill. Sen. Jim Bunning (R-KY) said, "It's not a filibuster when you object." All in a week when the nation's unemployment rate remains stubbornly stuck at 9.7 percent. We explain the story behind the stories with Jeanne Cummings of Politico; Michael Duffy of Time magazine; and John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times.

We'll tell you how disgruntled Democrats, disaffected Republicans and disgraced congressman could make or break health care reform, tonight on Washington Week. President Barack Obama said, "Look, health care. (Laughter.) This health care debate has been hard on my health. I've got to tell you." It's been hard on the President's political health too. Everywhere he looks, there are fresh fires to be put out, threats from Republicans. Sen. Lamar Alexander (R-TN) said, "We believe that what the president is doing is asking House Democrats to hold hands, jump off cliff, and hope Harry Reid catches them." Threats from Democrats. Gov. Howard Dean said, "There are going to be 535 people that vote on this bill and we're going to check every single one of them and in November we're going to hold them accountable." And of course, distractions, especially the curious case of Eric Massa. Mr. Eric Massa said, "I'm collateral damage. I'm road kill. In 72 hours nobody is going to remember who I am, nor are they going to care." And the Capitol's fascination with the president's chief of staff. Covering the story behind the stories: Charles Babington of the Associated Press, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, and John Dickerson of Slate Magazine and CBS News.

We've said it before and we'll say it again. This weekend, this very weekend, we'll be the turning point on health care. We'll tell you why we might actually be right this time, tonight on Washington Week. President Barack Obama said, "We keep on going. We are going to get this done." The president is revved up. He also said, "The time for reform is right now, not a year from now, not five years from, not 10 years from now, not 20 years from. It's now. And in just a few days, a century-long struggle will culminate in a historic vote." But Republicans say the fight will continue to November. Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "The American people do not want any part of this. And if anyone thinks the American people are going to forget this vote, just watch." Yet, one way or another, Congress is poised to act with some noes slowly turning to yes. Rep. Dennis Kucinich (D-OH) said, "I've decided to cast a vote in favor of the legislation." Rep. John Boccieri (D-OH) said, "Yes, I will be voting yes for the bill." Between now and Sunday, every arm will have been twisted, every possible dollar spent, and every rule invoked in a debate that spilled into the streets. Richard Ledford, small business owner: "It's not perfect, but it's a good step forward in reform efforts." Perette Godwin, opposes health care reform bill: "Healthcare now, let's pass a bill. I think the wrong decisions are being made. I think we're going the wrong direction." We look at the week with the reporters covering it: Peter Baker of the New York Times, Jeanne Cummings of Politico, and Karen Tumulty of Time Magazine.

Fans of health care overhaul in history. We'll tell you how it happened, what's in it, and why the fight's still not over, tonight on Washington Week. President Barack Obama said, "Today, after almost a century of trying, today, after over a year of debate, today, after all the votes have been tallied, health insurance reform becomes law in the United States of America." It was a fight to the finish complete with sore losers and astonished winners. Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "Hell no, you can't." Rep. Mike Pence (R-IN) said, "We will work in every way to repeal this legislation and start over." Rep. Nancy Pelosi (D-CA) said, "I believe that this is what we came here to do." Changes to Medicare, extended coverage for young adults and the uninsured and for prescription drugs, plus a nearly billion dollar price tag. Also this week, big developments with old allies and former enemies, as tensions build between the U.S. and Israel over a settlement freeze. Sec. Hillary Clinton said, "It exposes daylight between Israel and the United States that others in the region hope to exploit." And the U.S. agrees to a nuclear deal with Russia. Covering the week: Ceci Connolly of the Washington Post, Alexis Simendinger of National Journal, Helene Cooper of the New York Times, and Paul Richter of the Los Angeles Times.
